Speech classes boost drive

Foreign students interviewed over "Rotary Forum"

Three international students, Kettamath Bhagwandin, Philip Moh, and Karim Pasha Bahadori were interviewed on the "Rotary Forum" yesterday Thursday, Nov. 9 from 1 to 1:15 pm.

Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood, dean of men and Fellowship chairman of the Studio City Rotary Club introduced the students to the KXLA radio audience.

Dr. Al Wernsing, director of the program, moderated and asked the State College students questions concerning their countries and their opinions on current international problems.

Dr. Wernsing asked Mr. Bahadori "should we not consider the moral and humanitarian aspects of world peace? How can international students help promote peace?"

"The pages of history are a good evidence of human eagerness and struggle for peace. But unfortunately this has never been achieved," said Bahadori. "Today humans are full of prejudices and selfishness. We are all nationalistic and possessive. We seem to forget that all humanity, regardless of race and nationality, is made of the same flesh and blood, and that we are brothers in a broad sense.

"The citizen of any country, whether it is powerful or small, should regard himself not only as a citizen of his country, but also as a citizen of the world. In this way all men may become fellow citizens with one goal in mind—PEACE," concluded the speaker.

"How can our international students help promote peace?" asked Dr. Wernsing.

Karim replied, "The students of today will be the leaders of tomorrow in political, cultural, scientific and educational affairs. The hope of the future rests in the minds of the students of the world.

"We must appeal to the binding and uniting power of the

Driver education course offered

Increasing the number of safe drivers in this region is the main objective of the new Driver Education 174 course offered by the evening division of State College.

Designed to acquaint high school teachers with techniques and procedures used in instructing driver-training classes, it is the first regular college course of this type in the State of California.

By 1952, California's education code requires that all high school students take driver-training classes. Only instructors with a special secondary credential, secured by completion of the course in Driver Education (2 units) and Safety Education and Accident Prevention (2 units) are eligible to teach these classes.

State College's new program is slanted to help the instructor teach the operation and maintenance of the automobile. A knowledge of traffic laws, signs, signals, and general rules of the road also will be stressed. Although new in this area, such teacher training classes were first presented at Pennsylvania State College in 1936. Today, more than 700 instructors have received certificates of completion from the Automobile Association.

Along with operation of special dual-controlled cars, instructors learn pertinent techniques that can be applied to the local situation, Dr. Prinville pointed out. Selection of proper textbooks and supplementary materials to be used in the high school also are discussed. Explanation, demonstration, and scoring of psycho-physical proficiency, and skill-developing exercises will round out the class.

Dr Rodee to talk on Foreign policy

"The Nature of Foreign Policy", a lecture by Dr. Carlton C. Rodee, professor of political science at USC, will be presented Wednesday, Nov. 15, at 12 m, in SLH 201.

The lecture, second in a series on foreign policy, jointly sponsored by the Division of Social Science and Pi Gamma, Social Science honorary fraternity, will be moderated by Dr. Ake Sandler, assistant professor of Government at State College.

Dr. Carlton C. Rodee

Dr. Rodee, for eight years chairman of the political science department at USC, will seek to explode some of the myths and popular misconceptions regarding American foreign policy. He will stress, in particular, the "isolation" myth.

It is Dr. Rodee's contention the United States rarely followed an isolationist policy, although admittedly, the philosophy of isolationism has exerted a great influence on the minds of the public.

The re-evaluation of "American idealism" as a factor in shaping American policy also will be discussed by Dr. Rodee. He will show the important role "idealistic factors", demonstrated

Pep band plays

The State College pep band under the direction of Vernon Leidig, music instructor, is preparing for basketball games and rallies.

They will play for the State-Chapman game on Saturday, Nov. 18, and for the rally and game between State and Occidental on Wednesday, Nov. 22. The band will also be on hand for the Community Chest rally at noon on Wednesday, Nov. 15.

Any brass or woodwind players interested in playing for the games are urged to contact Mr. Leidig in Bungalow 5 or in the Music Hall at 11:00 on Mondays or Wednesdays.

Next week, Nov. 13 through Nov. 17, has been selected by State College Interclub Council as the testing period for on-campus democracy. A goal has been set and only by united effort of every student and faculty member of State College can this goal be met and the test be marked "A".

"Democracy in action brings the best rewards", stated Kay Skahill, campus Community Chest chairman. "High sounding phrases and sympathy do not extend democracy to the many unfortunate sufferers in our city. Money in the form of services rendered does a real job."

The goal of the Los Angeles Community Chest is $7,602,343.

The goal for State College is $500.00. In the past, State College has not met its quota. The other Los Angeles colleges, USC, UCLA, Occidental, Pepperdine and Loyola have met theirs and gone over the top.

"Our college can gain stature and recognition only by excelling," said Miss Skahill. "This is a new college, therefore, we must prove our worth to the community by taking the lead in civic functions of this nature."

The Community Chest funds are closely supervised and widely spent. Of $6,384,676.69 received last year only $672,364.60 were spent on the fund raising campaign and administration, according to official figures released by the Community Chest. This represents but 8.1 cents per dollar contributed.

These figures represent only half the amount spent by the 155 Red Feather Agencies involved. Through their own sources they received and spent a like amount. In addition, 66,000 volunteer workers contribute their time and energy to this good cause.

Character development and guidance for boys and girls took 25.5% of last year's funds. These services were applied through clubs, classes, athletics, groups and settlements.

Counseling and assistance to families and individuals took another 21.5%. This led to prevention of broken homes; guidance; help against sickness, death accident and desertion; legal aid and veteran employment.

Care for dependent and neglected children received 16% and 24.2% went for preventive and corrective medical care.

In addition, $300,000 has been allotted as the Los Angeles contribution to our fellow Americans fighting in Korea.

"Surely so fine a list of humanities deserves our whole-hearted support. Contribute as much as you can afford to next week's campaign for democracy's sake," urged Miss Skahill.

Letters to editor

What a relief to find a college with a "student conscious attitude." I am referring to the advisement program as set up by each department which we have here at State College.

Five years ago, if I had received any sort of counselling or had any personal interest been shown me upon entering a certain university (initials being "U.S.?"), I am sure I would now be a well-adjusted alumnus instead of a frustrated undergraduate.

Since my enrollment in State College this semester, I've been overwhelmed and very pleasantly surprised by the periodic consultations with my program advisor. The personal interest shown, the time spent, and the practical help given is something to which I'm not accustomed.

Young people entering college are usually ill-equipped to step into professional training without gaining a sufficient background knowledge of their chosen professions, combined with a proper knowledge of their own capacities and potentialities. The incoming students need help in planning their college programs. State College gives this help.

It's really amazing that State College's advisory system is so efficient, for this college isn't even three years old. I am certainly envious of those lucky sophomores who will enter this school in the future, for I'm only too well aware of the advantages of a good counselling program.

The leasing of land from the Braille Institute to provide more parking space was approved last Tuesday evening by the Board of Education.

Intended as a general parking area for both students and faculty, the additional space is expected to permit parking of 350 cars.

Negotiations regarding this property have been in progress for eight weeks and Dr. McDonald was proud to announce their completion at his weekly press meeting.

As soon as the president of the Board of Education signs the lease, funds will be appropriated and the maintenance department will begin work on fencing and gravelling the parking lot.

No final date for the lot's completion has been set.

great universals: education, science, culture and religion.

"Today, because of great danger of communism, it is clearly the responsibility of each individual lover of peace to make every effort to find the means by which to carry on the search for better ways of creating international understanding. Because the efforts to understand each other and live together in peace are the stuff of survival."

Philip Moh was asked "Do you believe that Chinese soldiers have come to the assistance of North Koreans because they feared they would lose the control of the hydro-electric power plant and services?"

Philip answered Dr. Wernsing, "Yes, it is true. Chinese communists are afraid of the loss of hydro-electric power plants which would cut off power resources from Manchuria. Therefore many divisions of soldiers, equipped with Soviet-made weapons, are showing a strong counter-resistance in North Korea. The Peiping Government announced that traditionally the Yalu River not only serves as a borderline between China and Korea, but also it provides electric resources available to both countries. So China is going to protect their rights in this area."

"Among other things," Mr. Moh added, "we should remember that wars cannot be ended by more wars. They may be counteracted through humanism otherwise the force of destruction will win."

The last student to be interviewed was Kettarnath Bhagwandin who was asked this question. "Will the present developments in China probably bring about the severance of British-Chinese diplomatic relations? And what effect will this severance of relations have upon Hong Kong?"

Kettarnath answered Dr. Wernsing with, "Yes, very much so. It is quite natural for British soldiers are being killed by the thousands by Chinese or Manchurian forces. This means that China and Britain will probably go to war ultimately."

The second question put to Kettarnath by Dr. Wernsing was, "What do you think is India's viewpoint toward communist China in light of the Tibetan invasion?"

Mr. Bhagwandin said, "India's viewpoint toward China is changing and one reason for this is that India does not believe in any kind of aggression. This, I believe, may cause a diplomatic break, but personally I think India will remain neutral."

After interviewing the international students on political questions Dr. Wernsing asked a few personal ones such as, "Why did they come to the United States? What are they studying? and What do they intend to do upon returning to their own country?"

Kettarnath Bhagwandin is from Dutch Guiana, South America. His major at State College is sociology and psychology. Philip Moh is here from China. His major is social sciences. Karim Pasha Bahadori, a native of Iran is a major in political science.

Jim Ensign paced the winners with three points. John scored the lone State marker. The win gave the Tigers revenge for the 10-0 dunking the Diablos handed the Oxy frosh squad last week.

East Los Angeles Junior College is the last league opponent for Bud Wise's charges. A win would give State clear title to third place ahead of UCLA frosh and E.L.A. Cal Tech holds down second spot with a lone
